

Currie Craven Award for Wilderness Stewardship

The Currie Craven Award is given annually to a person who has been an exemplary advocate for the promotion and protection of designated Wilderness.

The award is named for John Currie Craven, co-founder of ESWA and president for more than two decades. We seek to honor those who, like Currie, have toiled energetically and advocated vigorously in an enduring pattern of support for Wilderness. While nominees may come from any area, we focus especially on those whose efforts have included Colorado Wilderness Areas, especially in and near Eagle and Summit Counties, in their sphere of activity.

The submission deadline for nominations is 30 September, 2020. The winner will be announced at our Annual Meeting, Thursday, October 8. The award presentation will take place at a later date, when we can gather together.

The nomination should explain clearly the qualifications of the nominee, in 1500 words or less, and be sent to award@eaglesummitwilderness.org. People may self-nominate.

Selection of the winner is made by an Award Committee drawn from current ESWA members, US Forest Service representatives, former awardees, and others approved by the Board. Award Committee members may not nominate candidates or be themselves nominated for the award.

The award presentation is made at the ESWA Annual Meeting.
